Sponsor Statement House Bill 158

HB 158 removes from law the requirement that the Alaska Public Offices Commission maintain twenty physical offices throughout the state. It also removes the requirement that physical copies of reports be made available in multiple locations throughout the state. Physical copies will continue to be made available to the public, but only at the commission's central office. This bill also formalizes the requirement that electronic copies of reports submitted to the commission be made available to the public online as soon as practicable after each reporting period.
